I never said all knowledge is invalid if it's not formalized. Far from it. I gave an example of a human getting from point A to point B. Clearly we have no choice but to rely on informal solutions when devising a "design" for aspects of our lives that are not open to formal treatment. Overall My point is two things: 1. Often people don't know ...

Throughput Accounting offers a vastly different take on accounting than traditional forms of accounting such as standard costing, job shop costing, or activity-based costing. I would say it is an improved version of accounting, but that would be to say Throughput Accounting was built on the foundation laid by previous accounting systems. Nothing could be further from the truth. Throughput ...
